"Sky Harbor," the first home ever designed by the renowned architect and interior designer Robert Dorr Jr., is now on the market. Dorr, also known for designing The Dunes in Las Vegas and other international resorts and structures, crafted this rare Pueblo Revival design. Step into one of the original "great rooms," a term coined by this design, and be greeted by unique screened atriums that flood the expansive space with amazing breezes and the sounds of nature. The grand fireplace at the center of the room serves as the heart of this home. Every detail in the home's design was meticulously considered from the picture windows that capture the breathtaking views to the closets that seamlessly blend into the background. Original ceramic door handles and one-of-a-kind sliding doors in nearly every room provide access to cross breezes from the beautiful California weather. These doors lead to spacious fenced patios in the front and rear of the home, offering both garden and mountain views with the distant twinkle of city lights. The current owners have enhanced the living space by adding seating areas around the property and updating the kitchen with new cabinetry, stone counters, a range, and a wine refrigerator. A walk-in pantry and utility room provide ample storage space for laundry and other household tasks. This very special home offers the perfect blend of privacy, stunning views, unique architecture, and the distinctive lifestyle you've been seeking, all within minutes of the city's vibrant offerings.
