N/A, Los Angeles,

This spectacular 18th-century fixer in the neighborhood known as Elysian Park is just a ball's throw from the Dodgers' stadium and offers a tremendous opportunity. The home, dating back to the 18th century, was moved to the lot in the early 1900s. The property has rare architectural features, including coffered ceilings, plaster walls, and beautiful, intricately designed windows. The bones feature many original details throughout, including over 10 feet high ceilings on the first floor. Walking up to the lovely front porch with a double door entryway, you enter an era rarely seen. The home offers a large foyer with original stained glass windows and double door pocket doors leading into a front study, accented by a beautiful, architectural, rounded bay window seating area, offset by an adjoining den with an original fireplace. The home offers original hardwood floors, vintage stove, era-appropriate lighting fixtures, and door hardware. A large bathroom was on the first floor with a cast-iron tub and an original washing room. Upstairs, there are three bedrooms with a fully updated bathroom. Outback, you will discover a beautifully lush, large, highly private backyard. The property features a street-to-street lot. An additional basement area underneath the home is ideal for storage or a craft room with its separate entrance from the outside. The house is located on a cul-de-sac and has many walking trails nearby, along with local cafes and restaurants.
