N/A, Los Angeles,

A Highland Park bungalow full of charm and character, paired with a modern, high-producing ADU that offers both a private retreat and strong income potential. Together, they create a property that blends classic warmth with contemporary versatility- ideal for family, guests, or as a thriving Airbnb. Out front, a cactus garden catches the light, while the porch offers a quiet vantage point to watch the day unfold. Inside, the living room glows with natural light, flowing into a dining area made for both everyday meals and evenings that linger. Two bedrooms, connected by an updated Jack-and-Jill bathroom, hold the simplicity of comfort. The kitchen, spacious and refreshed, anchors the back of the home, with a discreet laundry nook. A bonus area extends beyond- a lounge, a den, or a corner to create. A wide back porch gathers the day's light, offering a serene spot to relax and enjoy the outdoors. Down the drive, the detached garage, dressed in barn-style doors, has been reimagined as an office, though its potential remains wide open. At the rear of the property, the fully permitted ADU, completed in 2022, feels like a place apart, a modern sanctuary defined by clean lines and abundant light. Floor-to-ceiling glass opens to the deck, pool, hot tub, and city views, dissolving the boundary between indoors and out, while shades offer moments of quiet retreat. A skylight carries the sky overhead, illuminating a space where design is simple, open, and thoughtful. A kitchenette, bathroom, and living area that move with calm efficiency, gently separating living and sleeping spaces. Around the back, its own designated washer and dryer, making this standalone unit wholly self-sufficient. With its own private entrance leading to the pool and hot tub, the ADU is both a serene retreat and a vibrant hub. Previously operated as an Airbnb, it has generated roughly $75,000 annually, blending effortless lifestyle enjoyment with strong investment potential. Adding to its appeal, the home is powered by Tesla solar panels and Powerwall, pairing modern efficiency with sustainable living. Situated just a short distance from the lively York and Figueroa Boulevards in Highland Park, with their cafes, shops, and nightlife, and within easy reach of Eagle Rock's amenities and charm.
