Even amongst the stately homes of the exclusive Huntington Library District, 1727 Euston Road turns heads. This custom-built Tudor, resting on a sizable lot just minutes from Lacy Park, is easy to fall in love with. Entering the foyer, you'll note the exquisite craftsmanship that makes this timeless residence so special. Originally constructed by the builder for his own family, no detail was overlooked. To your left rests a sunken living room with a handsome white marble hearth, perfect for crackling fires during the winter months. To your right lies the spacious formal dining room, boasting a striking bay window that floods the space with natural light. A short flight of stairs whisks you into the grand family room complete with exposed ceiling beams, a fireplace, and wet bar. From birthday celebrations to boisterous game nights, this warm space will elevate every occasion. Nearby, the recently updated kitchen is beautifully appointed and features abundant storage along with an oversized island that could seat a small soccer team. An attached eating area with a view of the lush backyard is where you'll savor your morning cup after the house quiets down. One bedroom sits downstairs while upstairs, two comfy and spacious bedrooms await along with the enviable owner's suite. This sprawling sanctuary boasts dual closets and a luxurious en suite with a soaking tub where the day's stress melts away. Approved expansion plans are ready to issue, offering the opportunity to add two more bedrooms upstairs and turn them all into en suites. These plans also include an option to transform the home's style into a modern farmhouse aesthetic, blending contemporary charm with timeless character. Outside, a large, grassy yard is shaded by trees and awaits games of catch on crisp fall afternoons. 1727 Euston Road is putting on a show, a graceful dance that blends stately elegance with warmth and charm.
