Rancho (RNC), Long Beach,

The essence of a Cliff May Rancho is the indoor-outdoor living environment, and this home is a beautiful example of this architectural style. Built in 1954 and expanded in 1976, this sublime midcentury modern residence is a peaceful and private refuge with all the classic hallmarks of this exciting design period. Features include open beam ceilings, floor to ceiling windows, honey-hued birch paneling, clerestory windows, and an open floor plan in which the kitchen and living room connect seamlessly. Recent upgrades to the home include central air conditioning, a remodeled hall bathroom with skylight, an interior laundry closet, and interior and exterior paint.
